...Discussion in the English Parliament.

London, July 2.—In the House of Commons last night the discussion of Dr. Butts' Home Rule motion was resumed. Daniel O'Donohue, member for Tralee, said the Home Rule movement was a ... compromise concerted by those who did not dare to face the penalties of Fenianism. He ...ledged the desire of England to conciliate ... and said that perseverance in this agitation would be in defiance of gratitude and justice. He said that the ultimate object of the leader of the ... was to incite Irishmen to force a repeal of the Union. Their success would plunge ... into civil war and annul the recent progress in that country. He said further that if England should continue to remove every pretext on the plea of misgovernment of Ireland, the result would be a disgraceful failure. He firmly believed ... would bring ruin to the interests of every ... in Ireland.

Robert Lowe, member for the University of London, said the establishment of a local Irish government would involve the necessity of similar bodies in Scotland and England, and the result would be endless disputes and difficulties.

...was unable to agree that Ireland had the right to a greater amount of self-government than Scotland or England. He demonstrated the groundlessness of the complaint that Irishmen were not appointed to high offices under the Government, and denied that Ireland was treated as a conquered country. He said two separate Parliaments would be ... in collision; that the minority in the Irish Parliament would be always appealing to the Imperial Parliament. He opposed the motion because it was injurious to both countries, and a great ... in the world was nearer than some supposed ... and he wished the people to be united. To accept this motion would produce disintegration in England and might result in the destruction of the Empire.

Messrs. McCarthy, Mitchell, Nolan, The O'Connor Don and others spoke in support of the motion. At a late hour the House divided and Dr. Butts' resolution was rejected by a vote of 61 yeas to 458 nays.

A PERTINENT INQUIRY.—The day after Speaker Blaine got his back up in the House an Illinois Congressman said to him: "Mr. Blaine, I am not very familiar with you and so I cannot speak as freely as I would to an old friend, but I feel that I ought to tell you that you made a fool of yourself yesterday." Blaine answered with a sigh: "I'm afraid I did forget myself." Then he added: "What kind of language do you use when reproving a man with whom you consider yourself thoroughly intimate?"

The Prescott Record remarks of an Alta woman: "They are blessed with a live woman at Alta, Utah. This sweetness locates a mining claim, sells it and then gets her husband to shoot the purchaser or his representative. That amiable lady has evidently solved the difficult problem of selling property and yet retaining the ownership."

The Salt Lake Tribune says: "There is a law in Utah which allows the Mormon Church but $50,000. Anything over that amount can be confiscated by the United States Government. The Trustee in Trust of the Church of Latter Day Saints has in his possession several million dollars of the Church money, known to have been filched from the poor, and now being used in the Royal household. As the laws of the land can now be enforced in Utah, let the Government confiscate this money and turn it over to the poor Mormons, who have so long been robbed in the name of the Lord."

OREGON.

There are twenty five carpenters at work on the new warehouse now being built in Albany.

Council of Grangers for Yamhill county will meet at McMinnville on Monday, July 6th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Mr. John Williamson, of Chehalem valley, has five hundred acres of wheat and oats sown and it looks splendid.

When the two warehouses now in course of construction are completed Albany will have a storage capacity of over a million bushels of grain.

A good many of the farmers of Yamhill are availing themselves of the spare time between this and harvest to take a pleasure trip to the coast.

About 200 head of beef cattle have crossed the Cascade Mountains on the Barlow road from Eastern Oregon for this valley the present season.

The farmers' warehouse at Albany is to have its elevator run by water power (Turbine wheel) instead of steam as at present, as soon as the Santiam Ditch is in running order.

The Yamhill Reporter comes to us this week on a double sheet and presenting a finer appearance than ever. During its patent out side it is a very fine paper and appears to be flourishing.

Two Albany hoodlums have a prize fight on their hands now for $2 50 a side. They have already had two rounds, bunged each other up considerably, and have postponed the final issue till a future day.

We are in receipt of the annual catalogue of the State Agricultural College at Corvallis for 1873-4. The number of Agricultural students is thirty-two. In the Collegiate Department we find 131 names enrolled.

One night last week some hungry Yamhiller wretch without the fear of the law killed one of Mr. J. C. Baker's fine ewes, valued at $50. The tracks of the man were plainly seen the next morning where he got over the fence with it.

Last Monday week a little boy named Holtboss, who lived with Mr. Burns just above Albany, jumped from a shed to the ground with such violence as to internally injure himself, from the effects of which he died last Monday, after suffering a week of intense pain.

Chehalem valley can boast of having as fine grain as any other locality in Oregon. The farmers in that valley have put in from a fourth to a third more wheat and oats than in any former year, and they say it is all on account of the Grangers. They are confident of a good price being paid the present season.

At a regular meeting of Valley Lodge No. 42, held at Independence June 30th, the following officers were elected to serve during the ensuing term: A. Denning, N. G.; W. H. Allingham, V. G.; Ab. Ress, Recording Secretary; H. Denning, Treasurer; W. C. Whittall, Permanent Secretary.

The Catholics will build a new church at McMinnville this summer. Architects have already calculated upon the bill of lumber. This building will be 27 feet wide and 50 feet long, with an extension 20 feet long at the rear for a parsonage. According to the plan the interior of the church will be decidedly neat and commodious.

Mr. O. H. Adams, a farmer living near McMinnville, had a leg badly jammed and fractured on Monday last. He was driving a mower on his farm and as he rode his foot was hanging in such a way that it was caught by a stump and pressed back against some part of the mower frame, fracturing the bone near the ankle and giving it a painful sprain.

The Moor saw mill on Panther creek, Yamhill county, owned by Messrs. Stevenson & Wright, was burned last Monday. The fire originated from some slabs which they were burning when a heavy breeze sprung up, and before it could be extinguished communicated the flame to the mill. All their efforts to save it were unavailing. Everything was burned except some lumber belonging to the Moor boys. Loss about $4,000.

The Yamhill Reporter says: Just now there is some wholesome preparation going on by farmers getting ready for the harvest. The old machinery is being repaired, straightened and smoothed up for use, while there is an unusually large amount of new machinery coming to the country. But with all the extra machines we heard a farmer remark, "There are none too many to save the crop this season." Farmers look pleasant.

A letter to the Salem Record says: Last Friday while out hunting near his sheep ranch in Butte creek, Mr. M. Whitlock was suddenly startled by the furious snorting and growling of a huge female panther and two of her pets. Mr. Whitlock being wide awake soon discovered that the animals had scented him, and the old one commenced roaring and plunging frantically in the direction of where he was standing, but he remained firm as a Gibraltar waiting for a sure aim. The animal finally made a desperate leap but our hero, being well experienced in shooting on the wing, brought his rifle to his face and quick as lightning sent a ball crashing through her head, when she fell instantly, lashing her tail furiously and crunching the sticks in the wild agony. She measured eight feet and a half from tip to tip. After the scene of battle was over Mr. W. ascertained that the cause of the family quarrel among herself and babies amounted to a fat buck, which they had just killed and partly devoured.

THE BIBLE AND ITS STUDY.

ADDRESS BY REV. A. [illegible], DELIVERED BEFORE THE STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION AT PORTLAND, TUESDAY, JUNE 30, 1874, AND PUBLISHED BY REQUEST OF THE CONVENTION.

Your attention thus far in this Convention has been directed toward what perhaps may with propriety be called the mechanical part of the Sunday School work. Your consideration is this evening invited to some of the characteristics of our Bible and a few remarks as to the way in which it should be studied. No Sunday School teacher can understand too well the peculiarities of this book which it is the object of all his labor to teach to others.

Waiving all further introduction I ask you first to recall the fact that in all the marvelous diversity of our Bible there is perfect unity and harmony in its aims and ends. There are verbal discrepancies which we cannot rectify because we can seldom see anything comprehensively; there are mysteries, but it is only because of our limitations. Yet in spite of mystery and limitation there is between the covers of that book through all its pages one line of visible gold. There is but one religion. Genesis begins with it: "In the beginning God." Revelation ends with it. Careful scrutiny finds nothing but visible progression from the first book in the Bible to the last. It was written by different men. It shows the characteristics of its authors varied almost as the books—yet through these distances, with these varieties in form of expression, there shines clear and bright the religion of Jesus in its different stages of development. The Mosaic and the Christian are not two but one, as the morning and noon are part of one day. The Mosaic was the acorn, the Christian the full grown oak; or, better perhaps, the one is the child, the other the man; the one is the sapling, the other the ripe cedar of Lebanon out of which temples are made. Some accept the New Testament but reject the Old, yet the New confirms the Old. Christ accepted and approved it, and if the one is reliable the other must also be. Eager eyes may search and find verbal inaccuracies; apparent contradictions on non-essentials may sometimes appear; it is to be regretted, but not to be denied, that there are interpolations; but remove all these, subject it to severest criticism, take away all that is doubtful, even, and untouched and beautiful shines the same connected thought, the center of which is Jesus who lived and died in Judea, again that the sinning and suffering might be redeemed unto God. The whole Bible is one.

It is the depository of the most ancient forms of truth known to men. There is no necessary reliability in age, from antiquity. Yet is there not a presumption in favor of that bearing the approbation of centuries? Can that which has been believed through a long series of years by the wisest and best be lightly and flippantly set aside? Age carries a presumption of wisdom. It is not to the antiquity of the Bible as a proof of inspiration that we look, but rather as an evidence that what has lived so long and maintained a constantly expanding life must hold with it something that the world needs. Common things are ephemeral. Truth applicable to one nation, age or people, and only one, lives only during the existence of the circumstances that started its life. Words that last are presumptively words of uncommon wisdom and universal application. How is it with this Bible of ours? The only authentic history of the world before the flood is found in the sacred books of Christianity. "The world of the future," says an American scholar, "never can know anything of the antediluvians except from the Jewish historian." And now listen to a quotation from a work by that most careful and estimable writer, Prof. Phelps, of Andover: "We have in the Books of Moses what no other literature can show—one or two stanzas of poetry which were actually composed in the antediluvian infancy of the race." Does it not help us to some conception of the venerableness of these volumes—to recall that they were written 1,100 years before Herodotus, whom all other literature denominates the "Father of History"? The Hebrew Jurisprudence is 700 years older than that of Lycurgus and 900 older than that of Justinian. You have heard that Thomas Jefferson was indebted for his conception of our American government to the polity of an obscure Calvinistic Church in Virginia, but Republicanism was foreshadowed in the Hebrew Commonwealth 3,000 years before the settlement of Jamestown. The lyric poetry of the Hebrews was in its golden age nearly a thousand years before the birth of Horace. The author of Ecclesiastes discussed the problem of evil 600 years before Socrates in the Dialogue of Plato, and the Epithalamium of the Canticles is a thousand years older than Ovid. The Book of Esther was a venerable fragment of biography, stranger than fiction, at least 1,000 years old at the dawn of the romantic literature of Europe. The Proverbs of Solomon are by 900 years more ancient than the treatises of Seneca. The entire bulk of the Prophetic literature of the Hebrews, a literature extraordinary, one which has laws of its own, to which there is and can be no parallel in any uninspired workings of the human mind—this mysterious, often unfathomable compendium of the world's future which the wisdom of twenty centuries has not exhausted, was the whole of it anterior to the Augustan age of Rome, and even the writers of the New Testament are all of them more venerable than Tacitus and Plutarch and Pliny the younger. And what shall be said of the Book of Job? Biblical scholars can only conjecture its age, but if that be true this is the oldest volume now existing—at least 1,000 years older than Homer. It was already an ancient poem when Cecrops founded Athens. When Britain was invaded by the Romans it was more time worn than the name of Julius Cæsar is to-day. Natural philosophers now turn to its allusions as the only record, evidence we have of the state of the arts and sciences 4,000 years ago. A modern commentator on the book has collated from it passages illustrative of the then existing state of knowledge respecting astronomy, geography, cosmology, meteorology, mining operations, precious stones, coining, writing, engraving, medicine, music, hunting, husbandry, modes of travel, the military art and zoology. Any other work surely which should be so fortunate as to be of uninspired authority and should give to the world the obscurest authentic hints of the state of these sciences and arts forty centuries back would be hailed as a treasure worthy of a nation's purchase.

Gather these facts together: the antiquity of the book, the variety of the authorships, and yet the perfect harmony and unity of all in the central thought, and certainly nothing could be more marvelously unique than the book to which we bow as our Bible. It is in literature what such a fact as this would be in art. There is in Rome a marvelous piece of statuary known as the Faun of Praxiteles. Praxiteles was a Grecian and among the first known to have carved in marble. Suppose that statue instead of being the work of one mind and hand had been performed in this wise: Praxiteles begins the work, carving the feet, and dies, leaving no revelation of the plan in his mind. One or two hundred years and another artist arises who begins where the first left off and completes the limbs; years more fly away and another comes who finishes the chest, and so on until the whole steps free from the marble a thing of life and beauty. Such a thing would be incredible in Art. Yet here it is in literature—one thought living and breathing through the many books of which our Bible is composed.

But further. This Book is honestly and fearlessly truthful in all its delineations of character and descriptions of life. A fact of no little importance is this. Compare it with other histories. How striking! It never conceals a weakness or palliates a fault. How often are these peculiarities misunderstood. God teaches men by warnings not less than by precepts. What more eloquently impressive than the lessons from the failures of those who were eminent in the Lord's service? What more marvelous than the unsparing honesty with which unfaithfulness is unveiled! Yet thus it appears in every condition of confidence. It is easy to expose the infidel, its frailties, but hard when it tears tendrils from our hearts and arms from our necks. Impartiality called upon the Athenian king to spare not even his son when in face of the law he had committed adultery. Read what book you will, follow the histories of Froude, Macaulay, Gibbon and Alison to their me..., and see if in one you can find such unimpeachable fairness as here. How completely are all castes and conditions ignored; how persistently purity of heart is demanded both in the Old Testament and New. How relentlessly the anger of Moses, the weakness of Saul, the crimes of David, the royal debauchery of Solomon, the timidity of Elijah, the blasphemy of Peter, the treachery of Judas are laid open, held up, and used as warnings a thousand times more efficient than abstract commands though voiced in thunder. But some say many things are not in keeping with the modesty of to-day. Not perhaps with that of those who make clean simply the outside of the cup and the platter, but when did such calm exhibition and relentless condemnation of vice, be it ever so abhorrent and vile, do aught rather than repel from the manifest evil? Those who may not be influenced by kindness must be startled by appalling pictures. There is a gospel of love, beaming its attractions from the serenity of Mount Zion. There is a gospel of law, flashing its convictions from the blackness of Sinai, and they who will not be drawn by the former may be startled by the latter. Some ears are deaf; they cannot hear that sweet "Come unto Me." Some eyes are blind; they cannot see the love in that glorified face. Such thunders awaken, and the picture reveals pictures repulsive it may be to us but a very inspiration to them.

The Bible is an incomparable book because of the splendor of its literary qualities. It is the conspicuous model whose influence has drawn around it more than half the literature of Christendom. It is the sun by whose radiance and warmth more than half the literature of Christendom exists.

With nothing else to commend it than simply its unexceptionable morality and its acknowledged literary excellence it would then occupy the highest place in the productions of human thought. Its supremacy rests primarily upon its inspiration, but remove this and it would take a lower than its present position, but a higher than all other books.

The English language has probably no language contains a finer didactic form than Wordsworth's "Ode to Immortality," but compare this or Bryant's "Thanatopsis" with the 15th chapter of I Corinthians. Compare them! There is no comparison. There is more sublime poetry in the prose of Paul than in the poet's songs. The English speaking language has seldom produced a genius more imaginative and versatile, an imagination more transcendent and cultured than that of Samuel Taylor Coleridge. He wrote nothing finer than that wonderful "Hymn Before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouny," beginning—

"Hast thou a charm to stay the Morning Star
In his steep course? So long he seems to pause
On thy bald awful head, O sovran Blanc."

Yet that hymn, which in the bud of song, like the mountain itself with its sky-pointing peaks and its living flowers skirting eternal frosts, seems to rise to the heavens, is prosaic when once we have caught the strains of the majestic harmonies of the Book of Job. I open its pages at random and read: "By what way is the light parted which scattereth the east wind upon the earth? Who hath divided a watercourse for the overflowing of waters, or a way for the lightening of thunder? Hath the rain a father? or who hath begotten the drops of dew? Out of whose womb came the ice, and the hoary frost of heaven, who hath gendered it? Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?" To try to compare such music as this with the grandest that others have written would be like a comparison of the Requiem of Mozart or the Pastoral Symphony of Beethoven with the routine practice of a school girl.

This is not mere eulogy. It is not a repetition of the cant compliment which it is usual to bestow upon the Bible. Listen to the testimony of a few names that the whole world honors in science and literature. Sir Isaac Newton says: "We account the Scriptures to be the most sublime philosophy." Sir William Jones, perhaps the completest scholar of his time, especially in his knowledge of the treasures of other languages, says: "I have regularly and attentively read the Holy Scriptures, and am of the opinion that this volume, independently of its divine origin, contains more true sublimity, more exquisite beauty, more important history and finer strains both of poetry and eloquence than could be collected from all other books." Milton says: "There are no songs comparable to the Songs of Zion, no orations equal to those of the Prophets, and no politics like those which the Scriptures teach." Says Thomas Carlyle, and surely no one would think that his words would be tinged with partisan favor: "I call the Book of Job, apart from all theories about it, one of the grandest things ever written by man. A noble book! All men's book! Such living likenesses were never since drawn. Sublime sorrow, sublime reconciliation; oldest choral melody as of the heart of mankind; so soft and great as the summer midnight, as the world with its seas and stars. There is nothing written, I think, of equal literary merit."

The Bible is incomparable among books in the extent and value of its effects. It is working and has long been efficient in every department of literature, science and art. The Institutes of Moses, and not the dreams of Plato or even the legislation of Lycurgus and Justinian, lie at the basis of our modern moral fabric. The Hebrew Psalmist and prophets are the inspiration of our literature. John Milton could never have written Paradise Lost or Regained, or Comus, without the Bible. Take out the single conception of the Virgin Mother and the Christ Child and you take from art its Madonnas, its Ecce Homos, its Last Suppers, and leave it to the effete corruption, the long worn out ideals of Greece and Rome. Take away the acknowledged influence of the study of the Bible upon their power, and the eloquence of Lord Chatham, Patrick Henry, James Otis, Lord Brougham and Daniel Webster would be weak as the strength of Samson shorn of his locks. But the influence of the Bible has gone deeper than this. Moving upon the surface of society it has penetrated also its silent depths. Where the Bible is read and revered there is morality and fraternity. Socrates and Plato taught, and the morality of Athens was unchanged; manhood was abused; woman was a servant, beast or a courtezan. The words of Jesus, which our Bible contains, have changed all this, and wherever it is loved and obeyed there the darkness has passed, the loveliness is washed clean, all men are free men, and in the purest sunlight, wearing the fairest of garlands, we love to enthrone our mothers and sisters and wives.

Have you never seen a house nearer to Hell than the Heaven it should be, poor, unfurnished, with little to eat, the children ill mannered, the mother sick, body-sick, soul-sick, and the father or son, or whoever should be the support, shiftless, a drunkard, a dead weight upon those who would be better without him? I have seen such homes—sometimes the husband at fault, sometimes the wife, sometimes both—and then have cried out, O God, can there be a worse perdition for a human soul than this? and even as I cried, seen a change creeping over the little home like the first ripple of light that the morning sun sends blushing and glimmering to the mountain tops. The father, the mother, or both, have found the Jesus that our Bible proclaims, have prayed to Him as the publican prayed, "Lord be merciful to me a sinner," and straightway the faces begin to get brighter, the old clothes are replaced by better, and the honeymoon comes back again.

None can read and follow the Bible without being better. It always changes by improving. It develops manhood in business, manhood in pleasure, manhood in home circles. Its influence is like the sun in its strength. It melts the snows, scatters the clouds, warms the air, speaks to the hidden homely bulbs and grasses and leaves and buds, and quickly comes the flower crowned summer again.

These effects are in perfect agreement with the professed object of the book. Whether inspired or not it aims at the highest good of humanity. It is impartial, for neither aristocrat nor democrat, for those whose wealth is great and those whose possessions are few, for all in every condition. It recognizes the manifest fact that all men are sinners—undone in character and prospects—and declares it to be its mission to rescue them without respect of persons and over all the earth—to point to virtue and eternal life. Its avowed object is the restoration of humanity to the likeness of God. Is anything nobler than this? "I came to save the world," said Jesus. "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost," said Jesus. Through all its pages runs the purpose of Love. All the types and prophecies of the Old Testament looked forward to it and symbolized it; all the books of the New Testament are histories or commentaries on the same subject. A wonderful fact! One definite purpose of good—always the highest good—runs from Alpha to Omega. It puts always before the race one pre-eminent truth—God so loved the world. To those suffering the wages of sin it brings the gift of God, which is eternal life. Every book, every person, every beautiful picture, every faithful delineation of degraded manhood, every chapter and verse, has its own appropriate position and faces straight toward this purpose, shining like a sun—God's love for sinning man.

The plan of this discourse has been as follows: Without special pleas for its inspiration we have noticed some of the characteristics of the Bible. Its various parts are in harmony; it gives the oldest statements of truth known to man; it is manifestly honest and fearlessly truthful in all its delineations of character and life. Judged as a merely literary production it is unrivalled in the history of literature. The Bible is incomparable among books for the extent and value of its effects. The professed purpose of the book is in perfect harmony with results which it had produced.

No direct argument for its inspiration has been made, and yet who can help feeling, this truly is from God?

On this book our feet are planted; from it our faith is derived. It is the inspiration of our sermons, the light of our homes, your text-book, Sunday school teachers, the ground of our hopes, the guide of our lives and our assurance of immortality.

It remains for but few words more to be said. Such a book, with such a history, directed to such ends, cannot be studied too persistently or thoroughly. As appropriate would it be for a sea captain to sail without chart or compass, for merchants never to look at the price lists, for engineers on railroads to be ignorant of the time table, as for Christians to neglect their Bible. It should be studied every day, not fragmentally, here a little and there a little, but connectedly as it is written. Every one should study it upon the Sabbath day, not polemically, to see what creed or dogma it may support or destroy, but what truth it teaches. The Sabbath school and Bible classes should less often be compelled to compete with warm dinners at home, which are right in their places, but whose places ought to be after the hour of study is over. More than half of our people go directly from church to their homes, when all who can should remain for the not less important services following. The Sabbath School or Bible service should be made as prominent and helpful as the sermon.

Our Bible should be studied reverently. Its claims should be considered impartially, its truth appropriated gladly. It should never be made a subject common enough for jest and pun. Bible conundrums are execrable. Improper familiarity breeds contempt. The Bible does not yield its richest treasure to those who simply read. It is not difficult to understand. What is essential is never obscure; yet it must be studied to be comprehended. It cannot be perfectly understood in its entirety without a knowledge of the people for whom it was written and the circumstances that evoked its utterance. By such study that which is for universal application is separated from that which is only ephemeral. It must be taken as a whole; no one passage can be separated and exalted as representative. Scripture interprets Scripture, and single passages should be read in the light of the central governing truths. It should be studied reverently and devoutly, for from what distant ages and what diverse people have gone its inimitable lessons; what memories and sympathies cluster around it. The oldest, wisest, most perfect system of truth, even its antiquity commands veneration. It is Christ's own message to man, superior therefore to all others, and binding upon him to whom it is given. It is God's word to the soul, necessary as food and air to the body, that which prepares us to live, prepares us to die and to be forever with the Lord. It is all summed up in these words: "We believe in the Holy Scriptures as given by inspiration of God and as an unerring rule of faith and practice." I call your attention earnestly to this subject, for none are too old, too wise, too perfect to learn from God.

A company of educated gentlemen having all adopted principles of infidelity determined to set apart one evening meeting for the burning of the Bible. A large fire was prepared, the Bible placed on the table, the glasses around it, from which they proposed to drink a blasphemous dirge. One was selected to conduct the farcical ceremony. He took up the book and was walking forward to cast it into the fire when, looking down, he hesitated, trembled, turned pale and, laying it on the table, said, "No, we will not burn that book until we get a better one."

Until we get a better one, why should not we, as the old Hebrews did, teach them diligently unto our children? This command is for us as well as for them—"Thou shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes, and thou shalt write them upon the posts of thine house and on thy gate."

Trusting that this paper may be helpful to those who love the Sunday School work it is respectfully submitted to the consideration of this Convention.

A Salem bag factory is thus described: On the 2d and 3d floors of the Agricultural Works burlaps are piled up like cord wood in a wood yard, and bales of grain bags, hooped with iron, are turned out continually by the busy workers employed. Four heavy sewing machines are handled by lady operators, while four young men are busy cutting up cloth and counting and sorting and baling the sacks. It takes a great deal of material and much hard work to make 200,000 sacks. The factory is run night as well as day and turns out 3,000 sacks for every 24 hours work. They are substantially made, with a double line of sewing on the side to strengthen the raw edge, first simply sewed and then doubled over and stitched through four thicknesses. Kinney & Co. experimented thoroughly to test the strength of sacks so made before attempting to manufacture them.

MORTUARY.—NEW YORK, June 23.—The funeral of the late Mrs. J. J. Audubon, wife of the great naturalist, took place this morning. Services were conducted in the Church of the Intercession and were largely attended by friends of the deceased. The floral tributes were numerous and handsome.

SATURDAY MORNING JULY 4 1874

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

This is the Fourth of July—the anniversary of the Independence of the United States It is expected of course, that the bosom of every American individual, native and naturalized, will thrill with ardent patriotism to day Everybody, without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude, will celebrate To the ladies, also, this inestimable franchise is not denied The old man will sit in the shade of his vine and fig tree—if the day be orthodox in heat, if he be a sensible old man, and if he have a fig tree—and muse over the wonderful changes that time has wrought in the ninety-eight years already numbered by our young Republic The young man will probably sit under somebody else's vine and fig tree, or do and say many things which must be regarded with some degree of allowance The irrepressible Small Boy will effervesce and fiz and throw up his hat at the bright splendor of each particular sky-rocket A few people will make orations and very few people will listen A good many will get drunk and some will be carried home on window shutters That is the programme, the bill of fare for to day For a brief time let us forget the rings and bosses, the Sanborn contracts, the Louisiana business, Credit Mobilier, Back-Pay and the other material signs of our progress, and think of—well, this is not a Fourth of July speech

PETITION EXTRAORDINARY

For some time past a petition has been in circulation, asking the Police Commissioners to retain the large force now in their employ The occasion of this petition is the action of the Common Council in repeatedly urging the Commissioners by resolution to reduce the police force. The legal power over the subject is vested in the Commissioners, and the Council is as helpless as the people They may recommend and request, but the decision of the Commissioners is, at last, a matter over which the Council can exercise no legal control. The Commissioners are to exercise their own discretion as to the force needed and the compensation to be paid to each police officer, and the Council is required unconditionally to provide the funds with which to pay the bills

Thus it is plain that the right to fix the number of police officers, and the responsibility that attaches to that trust, rest with the Commissioners, and with them alone, and this being the case it is fair to presume the Commissioners give more attention to the matter than any other persons, and are better prepared to determine the question of what force is really necessary And it is scarcely logical to suppose their judgment in this respect could be greatly improved by the advice of any number of persons who have hitherto given no special attention to the subject Nevertheless, the right of petition is a sacred right, and even the Metropolitan Police Commissioners of Portland may possibly be moved by the prayers of the people, albeit that august and nearly omnipotent body has answered the petitions of the Common Council only with contempt or positive insult

But there is one feature of this petitioning, which cannot but be regarded as a little extraordinary That feature is, that it is not the citizens in general that are circulating this petition, but the work is undertaken by the Police Department itself The petition is placed in the hands of the police, who solicit signatures In short the Metropolitan Police Commissioners of Portland have to petition the Metropolitan Police Commissioners of Portland against the reduction of the force employed by the Metropolitan Police Commissioners of Portland This looks a little odd, but as we remarked, the right of petition is a sacred right. And as to the question of taste involved in this extraordinary method of exercising the sacred right, we have nothing to say "De gustibus non est disputandum," was a maxim of the ancients, and is good for the moderns Besides, Mr A B Hallock, who constitutes the Board of Metropolitan Police Commissioners, so far as can be discovered with the naked eye, is about the last man with whom we should voluntarily engage in a "gustibus" contest when the cards are all in his hand The results of such a contest would, we feel morally certain, not be such as we could recount afterwards with any degree of gusto

But there is yet another peculiar feature of this case We are informed, and we think reliably, that of the persons who sign this petition of the Police Commissioners to themselves, a very large majority are induced to do so by positive misrepresentations The modest little document which asks the people to tax themselves about $10,000 per year more than the Council believe they ought to be taxed, and all for the benefit of the police, is presented mainly to persons who have residences far back from the business portion of the city, and these are told at the same time that the Council has demanded that the policemen who guard that part of the city be dispensed with Of course the withdrawal of all protection is a matter of grave import and the petition is signed at once We have heard several persons say they signed upon that representation, and would not have done so, had they known that the request of the Council was merely for a general reduction of the police force, and not for the entire withdrawal of the police from a certain section of the city If this is true—and we do not doubt it—it is the duty of the Police Commissioners at once to remove the policemen who made these false representations, whether they reduce the force or not But they ought to reduce the force There is no occasion for the keeping of such a standing army under constant pay when the business of the city is dull and times hard and no prospect of better times in the future It is greatly to be desired that the Metropolitan Police Commissioners may, on mature reflection, consider it wise to listen to the recommendation of the Council and to reason instead of being governed by their own petition to themselves That course would save to the people about $10,000 a year

SCOLDING THE INDEPENDENT PRESS

There has been a time—and it is within the memory of the youngest inhabitant—when the highest mission of the newspaper was to utter and to defend through thick and thin the doctrines and the record of the political party to which it belonged In that day the press rarely failed to give what it demanded of the people unquestioning, mute allegiance to party That time, thank God, has passed Now adays the faithful party organ is the exception, not the rule As a result, political leaders are more circumspect, public officials can no longer count with unerring certainty on a successful defense of schemes like the Credit Mobilier and Sanborn contracts, and if the public service has not been wholly regenerated, the people have been put on their guard—they are to day far more watchful than ever before To accomplish its ends rascality must lay its plans with nicer subtlety and execute them with far greater cunning than ever before Perhaps it is because of this increased draft on the statesmanship of the period that the few remaining organs of party are renewing their attacks on independent journalism all over the country

There is a class of politicians who delight in most extravagant, indiscriminate abuse of newspapers They are the individuals with immaculate shoe latchets Until quite recently Mr Butler, who characterizes the press as a "forty jackass, mud throwing power," divided the honor of representing this class with Mr Sawyer who found leisure, soon after the publication of the report of Mr Dawes committee, to publish several elaborate complaints against "the barking pack" who had accused him of neglecting the interests of the Government in the Sanborn contracts and the moiety business But a new champion of the much injured demagogue appears in The Republic, a publication which defines its own nature and mission to be "A Monthly Magazine devoted to the Dissemination of Political Information" In the June number of this periodical we find the following statement of grievances against the Independent press

> A great mistake had likewise been made affecting Congress and the country by depriving the members of the franking privilege, and throwing into the hands of the correspondents of the so called independent and opposition press the monopoly of news given to the country Congress and the country now hear the mercy of a set of men who may without stint or scruple, falsify suppress or manufacture reports of the doings of Congress to produce such impressions as they wish to create and there is no adequate means of countervailing them So it happens that by a portion of the press of the country Congress is systematically misrepresented and held up to public odium, and the individual members are assailed and opposed by a clique of persons whose character should discredit and expel them from all intercourse with honest and honorable men

The very savageness of this attack indicates, clearly enough, the spirit in which it was written. It may be true, as The Republic says of our public men, that some have been too harshly treated in the general overhauling of the public service which was begun by the Independent press a year ago But that Congress and the country lie at the mercy of such a set of men as that ascribed by this "political magazine devoted to the dissemination of political information," is the merest bosh Some public servants, we doubt not, have been unsparingly condemned when they deserved better things But that there are hosts of thieves and extortioners in the public service who have thus far escaped the ignominy they deserve is a fair inference from the disclosures of the past two years It is a noticeable fact that in the edition of the magazine devoted to the dissemination of political information," from which the above quotation is made, we find Secretary Sawyer's defense in the Sanborn investigation, an article denouncing "the folly and insanity" of the present Congress in repealing the law under which Special Agent Jayne plundered New York importers, and an elaborate defense of the District ring No one knows how this handsome magazine (for it is conducted with marked ability), is supported The circulation of a political magazine must needs be limited, on a $2 subscription Some one must supply the money which supports this ardent champion of the party, right or wrong It may be that the country has more to fear from such zealous partisans as The Republic than from any other class of newspapers At all events the people sympathize just now with the efforts of the Independent press to stay the calamities which impend through a loose or vicious legislation and administration If we ever get back to the honest simplicity of the first days of the Republic the Independent press will be the agent to bring it about The heartiness with which the masses support and encourage Independent journalism shows that they believe this And it will be a sorry day for the Republic when our people learn to look solely to such political magazines as The Republic for information"

Switzerland it seems has been sending her paupers and imbeciles to the United States—so Mr Rublee our Minister to Berne says He has called the attention of the Swiss Government to this thing as practiced by the Communal authorities of the Canton of Argovie In his letter he says that on one occasion he having this certain persons, destitute of pecuniary means and without the ability to earn a subsistence had been shipped at the public expense by a Commune of that Canton he interfered, and that an individual thus shipped by an emigrant agent, had been prevented from coming to this country The President of the Swiss Confederation spoke with reprobation of the practice, and it is believed that it will not soon be repeated

The pound master of New York City was arrested the other day on complaint of Henry Bergh of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Mr Bergh charges Marriott with needlessly torturing dogs killed under the pound master's system There is to be a trial Marriott alleges his system smothering in carbonic acid gas—is as humane as any that can be devised

General Fitzhugh Lee has at last given to the world his opinion of the Order of Patrons of Husbandry He favors the apparent objects of the Grangers but objects to their secrecy and to the introduction of women into membership We suppose the Grangers can go on now

HEAVY FLEECES

The New York Times calls the "rock rooted and buttressed reminiscence known as Democracy" to the rescue, after this fashion

Mr Augustus Schell Grand Sachem of Tammany has issued an address to the faithful which will doubtless arouse the country to a true sense of the dangers before it Says Mr Schell "The foundations of the greatness and of the glory of the American Union are imperiled to day by the usurpation of an Administration more personal in its temper and by the encroachments of a party more audacious in its contempt of limits and of law than have ever before been known in our history" Mr Schell goes on to speak of the President as an "insolent Executive" and tells us that "our national honor and the safety of our citizens abroad [are] left to depend on the forbearance of foreign States" We seem to be in a very bad way indeed take it altogether and it is to be hoped that the friends of Tweed and Connolly will rally to the rescue or there is really no saying what will become of us

CITY.

PENNSYLVANIA MINERS TO DEVELOP WASHINGTON TERRITORY'S COAL DEPOSITS.—We received a call yesterday from Mr. J. W. Lysle, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania. Mr. L. was formerly a resident of this coast, where he purchased a large tract of land in the coal region of Bellingham Bay, and adjoining the mines now worked there. In 1868 he returned to Pennsylvania, and has since been actively engaged in the coal trade on the Monongahela. He has always had the desire to return to the coast, and now comes to develop his coal lands. He is accompanied by Mr. D. W. Jones, a thorough mining engineer of long experience in the coal mines of Western Pennsylvania, who will make a thorough prospect of the land, and develop the mines. Mr. Lysle is sure of [illegible], and says with proper management the margin of profit will be large on coal laid in San Francisco at $8 50 per ton.

AN "OLD TIMER."—On the last steamer from San Francisco there arrived an "old timer" in the person of Martin Bulger. This gentleman is doubtless well known to many old residents of Portland and Astoria. Twenty-three years ago Mr. Bulger resided in Astoria, and was engineer on one of the boats which ran between that port and Portland. Years ago he went to San Francisco, where he has since resided. At one time he was Harbor Master at San Francisco. For some years Mr. Bulger has been associated with the firm of Deacon & Bulger, proprietors of a very large, extensive machine shop. Few men on the coast are more thorough and competent engineers than "Mart," as he is known. He enjoys the honor of being the first engineer who handled the throttle valve on the splendid steamer Japan, from San Francisco to China and the return trip.

THE OTHER LIQUOR ORDINANCE.—The City Fathers are now paying a good deal of attention, at each meeting of the Common Council, to ordinances on the subject of liquor licenses. The latest ordinance on the matter, amendatory of the one passed June 24th, which fixes the license at $100 per quarter, is an ordinance introduced last night, read twice and laid over until next meeting of the Council. It provides that the license to sell beer or malt liquors only, to be drunk on the premises where sold, shall be $25 per quarter, and further that restaurant and boarding house keepers, who sell only beer or malt liquors, to be drunk at their tables, shall pay $7 50 per [illegible] for license to so sell. The ordinance seems to be favorably received by the Council, and will probably pass.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.—On Wednesday evening last D. G. C., O. F. Bell, installed the following officers of Excelsior Lodge No. 1 for the current term: C. C., Le F. A. Shaw; V. C., Isaac Blum; P., Carl Bosco; M. A., Charles [illegible]; I. G., E. Jurgensen; O. G., —— Murphy, and on Thursday evening D. G. C. Bell, installed the officers of Mystic Lodge No. 2 for the current term, as follows: C. C., Ed. Wilcox; V. C., Geo. C. Sears; P., Chris. P. Gates; M. F., E. A. Stolte; M. A., H. T. Hudson; I. G., W. Deardorf and O. G., C. H. Williams. After the respective ceremonies, the members repaired to the well known cuisine of Allisky & [illegible], where ample justice was done to the good thing, provided for the refreshment of the inner man.

PERFORMANCE AT THE ASYLUM.—The Minstrels gave a performance lasting nearly two hours, on Thursday afternoon, to the inmates of the Insane Asylum. About 250 persons were present, including inmates and visitors. It was a rare treat to these unfortunates. They enjoyed the entertainment very highly, and expressed their approbation by prolonged applause and encoring several of the performers. The antics and eccentricities of Little Mac afforded the patients great amusement, to which they gave expression by laughter and clapping of hands. It was an event which will long be remembered with pleasure by these unfortunate beings.

STEAMER SAILED.—Last evening at 8 o'clock the steamer sailed for San Francisco. She carried hence the following passengers: D Nakes, George Telin, members of Maguire's Minstrel Company—Arly, Kohler, Smith, Murphy, Marks, Loomis, Newcombe, Blackburn, Little Mac, Nunis, Schriener, Russell, Knight, Bodecker, Baker, Welsh, Rice, Reed, Sweatnam—Miss Emery, Hamilton Boyd, Mrs Legrand and two children, J R Taylor, N G Brown, W Waldin and wife, Mrs Falin, Mrs Hopkinson and child, Miss R A Bills, S L Stone, M Oppenheimer, F A Sawyer, P Stewart, A Booth, D Held, W, F & Co's messenger, and 25 in the steerage.

SCHOOL TAXES.—The Clerk of School District No. 1 is now engaged in making out a list of the delinquent taxes for school purposes for the years 1871, 1872 and 1873, which will be published in a few days. Persons wishing to save the extra expense of advertising had better call immediately and settle with the Clerk. The first quarterly report of the present school year will also be published in a few days.

SCHOONER SUPERIOR.—This schooner, which moored at her berth at Central docks last evening, was fourteen days out from San Francisco. She had light head winds from the northwest the entire passage. On Saturday, June 27th, she spoke the barkentine Jane A. Falkinburg, bound for Honolulu, in latitude 13° N., longitude 130° west. The Superior brought 250 tons of freight.

MOTION DAY.—This being a non-judicial day, no court will be held to-day. Saturday is usually set apart as motion day, but as no court will be held, Monday has been fixed by the Court as the time for hearing and deciding all motions. As about all the business of the term has been finished, it is probable that the court will adjourn on Monday or Tuesday.

Everybody is expected to celebrate to-day. Some will go to East Portland. Many are booked for some excursion. Those who remain in town will probably visit the Museum. It will be time and money well invested. The excursionists can visit the Museum in the evening, and see the special attractions offered to-day.

RAISING OF CHIEFS.—Last evening Grand Sachem Le F. A. Shaw raised the following members of Onconta Tribe No. 4, I. O. R. M.: [illegible] Barker, Sachem; B. P. Collins, Senior Sachem, and John Farrow Junior Sachem. At the conclusion of business, those in attendance adjourned to Schmeer Bros. for refreshments.

IN LITIGATION.—In the court proceedings published in the Chicago Tribune of June 24th, we note the statement that W. S. Ladd, C. E. [illegible] and Stephen Mead had commenced an action against Clarke, Layton & Co. for $1,000.

POSTOFFICE AND WELLS, FARGO & CO.—To-day the postoffice will be open from 8 to 9 A. M., and from 5:30 to 6:30 P. M. Wells, Fargo & Co. will be open only from 5 to 7 P. M.

Governor Grover has appointed Eugene H. [illegible] Commissioner of Deeds, to reside in San Francisco.

BALLS AND PARTIES.

Crowded columns prevent an extended mention of the ball given by the East Portland Band last evening at Ankeny's Hall. The Band appeared in their new and showy uniform, and attracted much attention. They must have felt pleased at the large attendance on the occasion, and we are pleased to note the fact. In brief, it was a splendid success in every particular, and that is as good as if we wrote a half column about the affair.

CITY COUNCIL.

ADJOURNED MEETING, JULY 3, 1874.

The Common Council of the city of Portland met pursuant to adjournment, His Honor Mayor H. Failing presiding.

Present—W. S. Caldwell, Clerk, J. H. Lappeus, Chief of Police, Councilmen Besser, Catlin, Corbett, Hoyt, Lyon, Moreland, Thompson, Russell and Story.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

ORDINANCES APPROVED.

The Mayor submitted a communication stating that he had approved the ordinance providing for the removal of the wreck of the brig Duc de Lorges from the channel of the Wallamet river, the ordinance making an appropriation out of the police fund, and the ordinance making an appropriation out of the street lamp fund. The message was read and placed on file.

LIQUOR ORDINANCE VETOED.

The following message from His Honor the Mayor was then read:

To the Honorable the Common Council: I herewith return without my signature, an ordinance passed by your body on the 1st inst. entitled "an ordinance to amend Ordinance No. 1,489, entitled an ordinance to provide for licensing and regulating bar-rooms and drinking shops."

I have, as a rule, refrained from interposing objections to ordinances passed by the Council, unless such ordinances were thought to be in violation of the charter, or trenched upon the rights of tax-payers; but in the case of the present ordinance, the action of the Council having been hastily taken, and believing that the reasons assigned for its passage are not well founded, I respectfully return it for your further consideration.

Ordinance No. 1,489, of which this ordinance is amendatory, took effect on the 1st inst., and was passed after a long and, it is presumed, a most careful consideration by two Committees, and after the subject to which it relates had been fully debated.

The ordinance now returned, repeals the clause fixing the rate of license at one hundred dollars per quarter, provides for its reduction to fifty dollars, and was passed under suspension of the rules, without report from any Committee.

The only reasons I have heard in favor of reducing the amount of license are, that the sum as fixed by Ordinance No. 1,489, is oppressive to some venders, discriminating, and therefore unjust.

The charter of this city and the laws of this State, as well as the laws of nearly all cities and States, make a distinction between this and most other classes of business, by authorizing, and providing for its regulation; and in my opinion, such laws as are judicious and in accord with public sentiment, which provide for its proper restraint, cannot properly be termed class legislation.

Subdivision 4 of Sec. 38 of the Charter gives the Council power and authority to license, tax, regulate and restrain bar-rooms, and drinking shops. This clause of the Charter is variously interpreted by different persons.

The Council has been petitioned by a large number of citizens to prohibit entirely the sale of intoxicating liquors at retail, and this section of the Charter has been quoted by the petitioners as authority under which the Council is expected to pass such ordinances. This course is not only impracticable, but in my opinion unwarranted by any fair interpretation of the Charter.

On the other hand, it is claimed by others of extreme opinions, that any distinction between that and other kinds of business, which the Council is authorized to license, is wrong; and that the exaction of any amount as a license which may have the effect to reduce the number of those engaged in the business, is contrary to the spirit of the Charter, or at least partial and unjust.

I do not believe that the great majority of the community shares in either of these extreme views. I believe it to be the general sentiment of all classes, however diverse their views as to the propriety of selling or using intoxicating liquors, that the number of places in the city where liquors are sold at retail, might be reduced with benefit to the community, and without trespassing upon any private rights; that the reduction of these places in number would proportionately reduce vice and crime, and the expenses of police force, and local courts. If this be true, it is certainly within the scope of authority granted by the clause of the Charter above quoted, to restrain the business by reasonable increase of the amount required for license, and the Council may wisely and properly exercise such authority.

If increasing the amount of license should have the effect to reduce the number of places where liquor is sold at retail, thereby promoting peace and good order and lessening taxation, the wisdom of a proper exercise of the power to restrain will be vindicated.

If, on the contrary, it should not have that effect, it cannot be alleged that the ordinance is discriminating; the city revenue will be largely increased, and the expense entailed by this business will be less burdensome to the rest of the community.

It would probably be better to distinguish between the sale of spirituous and malt liquors by fixing a greatly reduced rate of license for sellers of beer only. With such an amendment, it seems to me that the ordinance as passed by the late Council ought to have a fair trial. The general provisions of the ordinance are such as ought to receive the support of all good citizens, whatever their opinions may be upon the subject of temperance or total abstinence, or whether engaged in the sale of liquors or not.

Supposing that the passage of Ordinance No 1,489 would settle this question for a time, I avoided any reference to the license question in my annual communication to the Council, but it is now my duty to state that I believe that the objections to the ordinance, and the opposition to its enforcement, is largely due to the feeling that it was passed in obedience to an extreme sentiment which ignores all other questions of interest to the taxpayers, and contemplates further legislation to the extremity of encroaching upon private rights. I am satisfied that this opinion is unfounded. An ordinance quite as stringent, and embracing substantially the same provisions, except the amount of license, was passed and enforced eight years ago, at a time when there was no special excitement upon the question. So far as I could judge, the members of the late Council who voted for Ordinance No. 1,489 were desirous only of framing such a law as would properly regulate the business, tend to the preservation of order, and correspond with moderate and practical views of the subject.

All regulations of this character must be sustained by public sentiment in order to be effective. I favor the rigid enforcement of all ordinances, but so long as the business is legalized, and the parties who are licensed conform to the requirements of the law, I think all law-abiding persons should abstain from annoying or trespassing upon the legal rights of persons who have obtained license or from countenancing such annoyance or trespass. A contrary course, however good the motive, can only irritate and provoke feeling, beget a spirit of opposition, and impede the enforcement of wholesome ordinances.

These views will no doubt meet the disapproval of those who entertain extreme opinions on either side of this question. They are given, however, with due deference to the opinion of others, with a desire for the best practicable results, and only because they seem required by the duties of my official position.

HENRY FAILING, Mayor.
PORTLAND, July 3, 1874.

The ordinance vetoed in the above message was then read by the Clerk and the question being, "Shall the ordinance pass notwithstanding the veto?" the vote was taken resulting as follows: Yeas—Councilmen Besser, Corbett, Lyon, Thompson and Story—5. Noes—Councilmen Catlin, Hoyt, Moreland and Russell—4. So the ordinance not receiving a two-thirds vote was declared lost.

An ordinance to amend the ordinance to regulate bar-rooms and drinking shops was read a first and second time and laid over until next meeting.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Councilman Moreland offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Common Council now proceed to the election of officers in the following order: 1. Auditor and Clerk. 2. City Attorney. 3. Superintendent of Streets. 4. City Surveyor.

On the first ballot for Auditor and Clerk W. S. Caldwell was unanimously elected, receiving 9 votes.

A. C. Gibbs and Chas. W. Parrish were nominated for City Attorney. On the first ballot A. C. Gibbs received 5 votes and C. W. Parrish 4 votes. So Mr. Gibbs was declared duly elected.

On the first ballot for Superintendent of Streets, Perry W. Davis received 7 votes, and Wm Braden and blank each 1 vote. So Mr. Davis was declared duly elected Superintendent of Streets.

On the first ballot for City Surveyor D. W. Taylor received 6 votes, blank 2, and H. J. Stephenson 1. So Mr. Taylor was declared duly elected City Surveyor.

THE PUBLIC MUSIC STAND.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the Committee on Streets and Public Property to have the musicians' stand on the plaza block painted with two coats of paint at a cost not exceeding $25.

On motion the Council adjourned.

THE BANK OF CALIFORNIA

AN INSTITUTION WITH A CAPITAL OF $25,000,000 DECLARED TO BE AN ILLEGAL CORPORATION.

The case of the Bank of California against George S. Collins and others, which is an action on a draft for $5,000 in gold, was tried in the Supreme Court in New York, before Justice Lawrence yesterday. Defendants having denied the existence of the bank as a corporation, it appeared in evidence that the bank claimed to be organized under a general statute of California, allowing the organization of corporations for the purpose of trade and commerce. The certificate under which it claimed to be organized showed it to be as a bank and for banking purposes.

Mr Winchester Britton, counsel for defendants, moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that the plaintiff was not a legally organized corporation, under the statute referred to as "trade and commerce" did not include banking.

The court held the point well taken, and dismissed the complaint, thereby holding that the plaintiff has no legal existence as a bank.

This is a very important decision, the Bank of California being one of the most important corporations of its kind in the country, and estimated as having a capital of $25,000,000.—Brooklyn Eagle, June 20th.

AN INTERESTING LEGAL DECISION.

We find the following in the Chicago Tribune:

A decision of some importance has been rendered by the Wisconsin Supreme Court in relation to the power of the State over the charters of corporations. The history of the case passed upon is briefly this: The West Wisconsin Railroad received a land grant, which was expressly exempted from taxation. Much of the land so acquired was disposed of at public sale to Eastern purchasers, and was eagerly sought for on account of the tax exemption. The Legislature afterward repealed the law exempting the lands. Taxes were extended on them by the Board of Supervisors of Trempeauleau county, and payment was refused by the Railroad Company. The case went to the Supreme Court, which has now decided that the State has full power to alter or repeal any rights, privileges, or immunities derived by charter directly from the State. As for the vested rights involved, the Court hold that they amount to nothing, for it was perfectly well known at the time the lands were sold, that the State might at any time repeal the act of exemption.

AN AMERICAN PICTURE-BUYER.—An American artist tells this story of a fellow-countryman who interviewed him in one of the Italian galleries:

"American! oh, I am so glad. Let me ask you some questions. I have been buying pictures. Can you tell me whether or not I have been cheated? They are about so large"—holding his hands in various positions to indicate the different sizes, "and cost so much"—naming the price of each. "Do you think I paid too much?"

The artist, being unwilling to disturb his equanimity, replied that it depended a good deal on circumstances, but he thought it most likely he had not paid more than was right.

"One more question, Mister," he exclaimed anxiously, as the artist was about to resume his work.

"Certainly, sir."

"Do you think," (leaning over him and speaking in a lower tone,) "do you really think, Mister, that these Eye-tallians put good materials in their pictures?"

HOW GRANT AND JONES GOT ACQUAINTED.—The Brooklyn Argus says: No particular intimacy appears to have existed between the President and Senator Jones of Nevada, until it transpired that Jones owned a very lucrative silver mine. Meeting him shortly after this discovery, Grant embraced Jones with great ardor, at the same time exclaiming:

"Jones, my dear fellow, you must have noticed what an effort it has cost me to hide so long the esteem, the confidence, the friendship, the affection that has been rioting in my bosom for you."

Jones flipped a new silver dollar into the air, recaptured it cleverly, and said:

"Grant, you're right—that mine's a big thing."

JOHN PHOENIX'S SON.—The many friends and admirers of poor "John Phoenix"—the late Captain [illegible] Derby, United States' Engineers—will be gratified to learn that one of the brightest and most promising young men admitted to West Point for years is the inimitable humorist's son, George M. Derby. He was appointed to the academy a year ago by the President, and has been at a preparatory school in New York since, taking the highest honors in every one of his classes. Whatever the son may achieve, he will never equal his father in an original combination of wit and humor, that has not been surpassed by the greatest of his successors, Artemus Ward, Mark Twain, and Bret Harte not excepted.

Christian Tiedeman, 75 years old, committed suicide in Davenport, Monday night, by drowning. Mr Tiedeman has lived in that city since 1850, and was well liked by all who knew him. About twelve years ago he cut his lip, while shaving, and it was not long before the wound developed quite a cancer. Four years ago there was an attempt made to remove the affected part by surgery, but the cancer reappeared in the throat, and his life has been one of misery ever since. The fact induced the belief that he sought relief in death.

A SUIT INCIDENT TO THE RECENT FLOODS IN LOUISIANA.—NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—The New Orleans Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company has instituted a suit in the Superior District Court against the Louisiana Levee Co. for $511,167 damages sustained by the failure of defendants in their duty of keeping the levees in order, which failure resulted in a break and the overflow of 25 miles of the Jackson road, and obstructing its operations.

The London News has this:

Six young ladies are at this moment "studying for the Bar." They are reading in chambers under competent direction, and are working through the same course as the students of the other sex. One of the young ladies was a "prizeman" in political economy under Prof Cairns, and their aptitude for law studies is said to be astonishing.

FOURTH OF JULY AT KALAMA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The citizens of Kalama and vicinity intend celebrating the coming Fourth of July by a railroad excursion to Chehalis Station, on the line of the N. P. R. R., fifty-four miles and return.

Boats will arrive at Kalama from Portland, bringing the Portland City Brass Band, also from Vancouver, St. Helens and Lewis river. The boats will come from Lower Columbia, bringing the people from Cathlamet, Oak Point, Rainier and different points on the river.

On the arrival of the boats the train will start.

At Chehalis there will be a picnic, dinner, a barbacue and refreshments in booths and stands.

After dinner an oration, by N. H. Bloomfield, Esq., Kalama, reading the Declaration of Independence, regular toasts and volunteer toasts, music singing and dancing. In the evening, on the return of the train to Kalama, there will be a grand display of fire-works, etc., and a grand ball.

The cars are being fitted up expressly for the occasion to seat 1000 persons comfortable.

The committee are using every possible effort to make this, our national holliday, one long to be remembered, sparing neither expense nor pains, and working with a zeal worthy of such a cause.

Minute guns will be fired at sunrise, a salute to each boat as it arrives, on the departure of the train, at all railroad stations, etc. The bands will discourse music at all stations and at intervals during the day.

All are cordially invited to come and unite with us in celebrating this national festival.

Fare from Kalama for the round trip, $1 00; children free.

A boat will leave Kalama for Portland early on Sunday morning, July 5th, as per agreement with the Portland Band. This arrangement will enable all who leave here on Saturday morning for the celebration at Chehalis Station (county seat of Lewis county, W. T.) to return here by noon of next day.

SATURDAY MORNING JULY 4 1874

JOHN STEPHENS PERICARDIUM

Now I am going to tell you just what my husband said to me this morning Doctor word for word and the invalid Mrs Stephens lay back on the sofa pillow the very picture of misery The family physician who was called on in average to the Stephens mansion three hundred and sixty times a year drew a chair close to the couch and waited quietly for his patient to open her book of complaint

Last night you see Doctor I had an ill turn and he wanted to come for you but when I got so he dared to leave me he concluded then we'd better let you sleep

Much obliged to him said the Doctor—sarcastic emphasis on the personal pronoun Last night was the first undisturbed night's rest I have enjoyed for a week.

"This spell is the same as I had the last time you were sent for Doctor—

"A slight nervous attack broke in the physician, nothing more

Well, it don't make any difference what you call it it was mighty hard to bear but let me tell you what my husband said first Doctor, before we go into symptoms When he was going down to breakfast, he says to me Kate, what shall I send you up

Says I, I don't want anything in the world but a good strong cup of tea Tell Bridget to send it up in the little tea pot I saw, Doctor, that he didn't move after I said this so I turned and looked up at him and such a picture of rage and disgust I never saw in my life Finally says he 'Tea' tea tea' it's nothing but tea from morning till night, Kate' says he, 'you are the color of a China woman now Why don't you order a good piece of beefsteak and slice of brown bread and a cup of chocolate, that would be a sensible breakfast

"'But John' says I, 'you forget that I am sick and have no appetite' I was all ready to cry, but I was determined that he shouldn't have the satisfaction of seeing the tears fall

Forget, says he, forget I wish to Heaven I could forget! It's nothing but grunt and groan from one year's end to the other I have lost all patience with you says he "When we lived in a part of a house, and you did your own housework you were as well and happy as anybody and no man ever had a pleasanter little home than John Stephens, but what have I now to love or to come back to?" and this, Doctor, is what he ended up with—

"'Kate,' says he, you are nothing more nor less than a drunkard, and in the sight of God, more culpable than most of the men who stagger through the streets, because the majority of those poor devils have some sort of an excuse for their conduct, and you haven't the slightest You have a luxurious home a husband doing his level best to make you happy—everything under the light of the sun to please you, and yet you will persist in swilling tea' Yes, Doctor, swilling was the word he used—bhoo' hoo' hoo' Oh dear me' to think I should ever have lived to have heard such dreadful language out of my husband's mouth, and then he says—and making me as miserable a wretch as walks the earth

'Pretty plain talk,' interrupted the Doctor, with a shrug of his broad shoulders

'Oh yes," sobbed the victim and so awfully coarse and unkind If I had had a spell and died there before his very face I don't believe he would have cared a snap of his finger I tell you, Doctor Ellis, there is such a thing as a man's getting hardened

"Evidently," replied the physician with a laconism absolutely painful

"But my husband has nothing in the world to trouble him but just my poor health, and I am sure I can't help that" This remark was more in answer to her companion's tone and manner, than the one single word that had accidentally escaped his lips, and this the Doctor felt

"Anybody would think by the way he goes on," continued the irate woman, 'that I enjoyed myself with spasms, and cramps, and fainting fits Anybody would think it was a pleasure to me to feel, every time I see a funeral procession, as if the hearse was going to stop at our door next. Oh, yes' such is very enjoyable, very, indeed'

Doctor Ellis took no notice of the last words, the man's eyes grew luminous, and his whole face declared that he considered himself master of the situation, and if Mrs Stephens had not been entirely taken up with her own ailments, mental and physical, that honest countenance would have betrayed him

You say,' he began, settling himself in the large easy chair, and assuming a strictly professional air, "that your husband has nothing to trouble him but your health how do you know that, Mrs Stephens?"

How? Why how do I know anything? By the evidences of my senses Don't I know that John Stephens has a splendid business that looks after itself, a magnificent income, and money enough to live on the bare interest, as well as a family need to live If he never entered his office again while he has breath."

"But money isn't everything, Mrs Stephens," proceeded the physician, with a calmness almost Mephistophelian "There are other troubles besides money troubles How about health, madame?

Health' Dr Ellis' Why there isn't a healthier or a sounder man than my husband in the United States He eats more in one meal than I do in three months

There is nothing the matter with your husband's stomach Mrs Stephens Doctor Ellis shaded his face with his hand and waited further developments Mrs Stephens mistook this attempt at forced concealment for emotion, and immediately assuming a sitting posture brushed her eyes and looked piercingly into her companion's face

Why do you accent the word 'stomach' so strongly, Dr Ellis?" she inquired in anxious tones Mrs Stephens was forgetting herself and this the Doctor hailed as an excellent omen

Only that I might make you understand that a man's digestion could be most unexceptionable, and yet he be far from sound in other directions"

'Then you mean to tell me that my husband is sick"

'I do"

'Perhaps you will go still further and say dangerously"'

"If you do desire it,'

'Oh Doctor Ellis, how cold and unfeeling you are' I should think you ought to know by this time—" and just here Mrs Stephens broke down entirely, and sobbed as if her heart would break

'Ought to know what, Mrs Stephens?' inquired the Doctor, with uncalled for deliberation

You ought to know—to know—that my —my husband's health and life are of a good deal more consequence to me than my own"

Ah indeed," interrupted the physician, with an elevation of the bushy eyebrows, immensely suggestive of a contrary opinion as well as several very excellent reasons for said opinion

Doctor Ellis, will you be kind enough to tell me what's the matter with my husband?

Mrs Stephens, was now on her feet—tears all wiped away, eyes flashing with resentful spirit, and only the little quaver of her lip to show how deep a wound the kind heart in her bosom had sustained There she stood, reproachful, defiant, determined womanly The Doctor was delighted and such an honest face it was that he carried around with him from door to door, from sunrise to sunset, every day in the year that it was a mighty hard matter to keep it from an immediate betrayal of the whole purpose

Mrs Stephens said he 'you have no cause to be alarmed If I can only get your co-operation in this business, I feel certain I shall be able to make a well man of your husband in a few months, at the longest but as true as I sit here before you I cannot do this alone

Why have I not been informed of this before'' broke in Mrs Stephens imperiously

Who was there to inform you, madam? Your husband does not know his condition and I should really like to be told when you have been sufficiently calm to hear all that was necessary for you to know'

But Doctor Ellis, I should think you ought to have understood that my own health and comfort are nothing compared to my husband's Mrs Stephens was weeping again There is no sacrifice that I would not make for him

Curious creatures' muttered the Doctor delightful bundles of contradictions How the mischief should I know Mrs Stephens how much you care for your husband' I am sure you have spent the last hour complaining about him Is that the way women generally testify their regard for their husbands'

O, don't Doctor Ellis, please don't I will never complain again—never—if you will only let me know what I can do for him Do you know Doctor, I had begun to think lately that something must be amiss with him, he was growing so irritable Poor dear! how wicked I have thought I have treated him

"This, then, is the trouble I shall take it for granted, madam that you know something about physiology and can follow me without difficulty?'

O—yes for mercy's sake go on

'Very well I find that the pericardium—

The pericardium repeated Mrs Stephens You know what that is I suppose?

Evidently Mrs Stephens anatomical knowledge was limited She shook her head in despair Something about the heart is it not? she asked at last

Yes the pericardium is the membraneous sack that holds the heart Well some time this sack—it is no matter about particulars Mrs Stephens and Dr Ellis [illegible]

It is enough though for me to say that we are both possibly anxious that his heart should remain where it belongs Mr Stephens must be amused He wants the opera the lecture the social circle entertaining books—a happy home—music You play and sing do you not Mrs Stephens

Oh yes—I used to [illegible] Mrs Stephens tones were so pitiful now that big Dr Ellis really and truly was obliged to wipe both of his eyes and his nose Before he was aware the [illegible] had gotten the upper hand

Well, try it again get a teacher and go to practicing

But how am I going to manage my [illegible]' sobbed the lady

"Well perhaps between us both—you using your will power and thinking of your husband going out with him and taking care of him—and I doing my best in my way—we may be able to subdue them But you must remember this, madam—do not let Mr Stephens have the faintest suspicion that you think anything is the matter with him and above all, do not treat him like an invalid Just amuse him and [illegible] you know just as you used to when you were first married

Another series of sobs from Mrs Stephens

The Doctor arose to go His patient had entirely forgotten that he had left no prescription

"About tea Doctor" she asked, as he prepared to leave Do you think it very hurtful"

"As an occasional tonic I have no objection to tea, but as a daily beverage madame it is an invention of the devil Good morning"

John Stephens sought his home that evening with a heavy heart His wife he believed a confirmed invalid, or hypochondriac—it mattered little which one was as bad as the other His remonstrances were of no avail he was doubtful even whether his wife loved him He opened the door softly with his latch key. This had become habitual seldom did the gentleman show himself to his beloved wife until after the dining bell had summoned the family to the dining room

A strain of music met and transfixed him on the very threshold Abt's beautiful song was being rendered, and his wife was the musician He was just in time to hear—

> The eyes that cannot weep,
> Are the saddest eyes of all

For a full year this charming voice had been as silent as the grave

"Company, perhaps" he muttered Curiosity overcame him He opened the parlor door and stepped in There was Mrs Stephens, becomingly attired, all alone, enthusiastic over the fine rendition of a piece of music.

I have given up tea, and am going to try hard to be well I guess my voice will all come back, John

I guess so," he replied folding her tight to his heart

Three months of this the cure was so radical that Dr Ellis made a clean breast of the whole thing and there is no word or set of words that can provoke so hearty a laugh in the happy home of the Stephens as this physiologically scientific one—Pericardium

Advices from the East up to June 27th indicate a more cheerful and buoyant feeling in financial and commercial affairs than has existed for a long time past The causes assigned were the adjournment of Congress and the settlement for the present of the currency question While the new law on the subject is considered deficient in many respects notably in regard to a prospective resumption of specie payments, it is accepted with favor for one reason and that is that it fixes a limit to legal tender circulation A commercial letter from New York to the Call says the power assumed by the late Secretary in moving circulation from one point to another was always an element of disturbance to business and the elimination of that element cannot fail to prove wholesome The abolition of the system of national bank reserves and the substitution of a deposit of five per cent on their circulation with the Secretary of the Treasury is [illegible] to the extent of the amount of reserves which imprudent banking may release It is fair to suppose however that the leading institution looking to their own safety and to the safety of their depositors will continue to maintain the proper reserves and to require such management of other institutions as a condition of preserving mutual credit and confidence With a feeling of assurance which the knowledge of these leading facts inspires in spire, and with that feeling measurably strengthened by the prospect of abundant crops and a continued export demand for leading products of the soil there appears to be warrant for the expectation of a large and prosperous fall trade on the Atlantic side

A Washington dispatch of June 28th gives an extract from a letter written by the Comptroller of the Currency giving his construction of the new currency law in reference to the reserve required to be held by national banks in which he says My construction of the act of June 20 1874 with reference to reserves of National Banks is that the reserve upon circulation is abolished but that National Banks are required to keep a reserve upon deposits as provided in sections 31 and 32 of the National Banking Act a certain proportion of which must be kept on hand, and a certain other proportion with their reserve agents in cities enumerated in the sections referred to The banks are also to keep an amount equal to five per cent of their circulation on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States which amount may be deducted from the aggregate amount of reserve required to be kept upon deposits'

Miscellaneous.

The latest monthly report of the Bureau of Statistics shows that allowing for the differences in warehouse account the exports from the United States for the eight months ended February 28th, this year were in excess of the imports $[illegible] while for the corresponding period of 1873 the reverse was the case the imports exceeding the exports by $[illegible] These figures tell their own story better than any comments could tell it for them

The Commercial Reporter of this city makes its appearance this week under a new management Edward Atkinson being publisher

Wheat sacks are now as cheap in this market as in San Francisco but an advance is anticipated to take place at an early day

The reduction of passenger rates on the various railroad lines in the West as noticed in our dispatches will have a tendency to promote emigration and there is no reason why Oregon should not receive a benefit in the way of addition to her population

The steamship companies have advanced the rates between Los Angeles and San Francisco The cabin fare is now $12 and freight $4 per ton

We have heard a good deal of complaint about the condition of much of the wheat shipped from this port Producers must exercise more care in cleaning their grain if they expect it to bring its full value in the market

Shipping Intelligence

The steamer Oriflamme sailed for San Francisco at 8 o'clock this evening with a full freight list She took a very heavy shipment of wool
